

There is no great meal without great wine

Wine and food should complement each other—light wines with light meals and robust wines with hearty meals.

Wine can be the perfect finishing touch to a fine meal, but many people often question what wines will properly pair with the flavors of certain dishes. Feel free to experiment with favorite pairings of your own. The only rule is that wine and food should be balanced—neither should overpower the other.

If you are having more than one wine with a meal, start with the lightest and simplest and work your way up to the more full-bodied wines.
